A Photographic Look at the Visual Arts

Book 4

These portraits of 226 people involved in the visual arts span Oregon and southern Washington. The first two books in this four-book series consist of black and white images created with film. The third and fourth books contain all color images created with a digital camera.

I began this series of portraits shortly after opening a studio in downtown Portland in the mid 1990s. Initially, my artist clients, posing with their art, provided interesting subject matter. As time passed the project expanded to include friends, family and others who were making, or involved in the arts.

Rather than providing a survey of the most well-known people in the regional arts scene, this collection of images reflects the people I have interacted with and come to know through my life in Portland and my work as a photographer of art.
